Unit 1 textbook answers — with reasons

Level 11 · C1. The page numbers below are the printed page numbers in the textbook, not the PDF viewer's page count. Try each exercise first, then read the reason. A later supplemental scan includes printed pages 18 and 158 and partial audio scripts. The recordings and video are still unavailable, so sound- or video-dependent tasks are marked Media needed. See the separate Unit 1 Lookback answer key.

Lead-in — printed page 6

Exercise 1A · Complete the text

1. changed — The subject is “the rise of Google,” and has changed is the present perfect form used for a past development with a present result.
2. according — According to research introduces the source of a claim.
3. the — The phrase refers to all the information we could want; the definite article completes all the information.
4. It's been suggested — A passive reporting phrase introduces a proposal without naming a specific researcher.
5. to forget — The adjective likely is followed by a to-infinitive: likely to forget.
6. might — This modal expresses possibility, not certainty.
7. get hold of — This multi-word verb means “obtain” or “find.”
8. remembering — After the preposition at, use an -ing form: better at remembering.
9. Interestingly — The adverb comments on the whole statement that follows.
10. on — The collocation is rely on someone.

Exercise 1B · Parts of speech

1. according — It has a present-participle -ing form, although according to acts as a compound preposition here.
2. changed — This is the past participle in has changed.
3. to forget — This is a to-infinitive.
4. Interestingly — An adverb modifies the statement.
5. the — This is the definite article.
6. get hold of — The words work together as a multi-word verb.
7. might — This is a modal verb expressing possibility.
8. It's been suggested — This is passive: it + has been + past participle.
9. remembering — Here it is a gerund after at.
10. on — The verb rely takes the dependent preposition on.

Exercise 2A · Correct one mistake per sentence

1. One of the most interesting things about my job is the people I meet. Why: One of the... is followed directly by a plural noun; the extra of before things is wrong.
2. I haven't seen my parents for five years. Why: For expresses a length of time; since introduces a starting point, such as since 2021.
3. I studied geography in college, so I know a lot about different countries. Why: Know describes a state and normally takes a simple form.
4. I haven't told anybody about my hobby. Why: In standard English, haven't and nobody make an unwanted double negative here.
5. It's difficult to find work these days. Why: It's means it is; its is possessive.
6. I've been to Spain many times in the last few years. Why: The specific time phrase is in the last few years.

7. Do you think it's warm enough for me to go without a coat? Why: Put enough after an adjective: warm enough.
8. I adore living by the sea. Why: Adore is normally followed by a noun or -ing form, not a to-infinitive.

Exercise 2B · Name the error type a tense → 3; b word order → 7; c pronoun → 4; d preposition → 2; e punctuation → 5; f verb pattern → 8; g missing word → 6; h extra word → 1. Why: Each category describes the correction made in Exercise 2A.

Exercise 3A · Odd vowel sound

1. seek — It has /iː/; fierce and hear share an /ɪə/-type vowel in many accents.
2. bought — It differs from the /aʊ/ vowel in house and cow.
3. aware — Its vowel differs from /eɪ/ in sail and blame.
4. bear — Its vowel differs from /ɑː/ in calm and heart in many accents.

Exercises 3B–C: Media needed. The chosen words and pronunciation check depend on the recording. Exact vowel quality can also vary by accent.

Exercise 4A · Multi-word verbs

1. get across = communicate clearly. Why: An idea that gets across reaches the listener.
2. come across = encounter by chance. Why: You can come across a word while reading.
3. look up = search for information. Why: You look up a word in a dictionary.
4. make up = invent. Why: Someone can make up a story.
5. carry on = continue. Why: Carry on means keep doing something.
6. hold on = wait. Why: This is common in speech and phone conversations.
7. watch out = be careful. Why: It is used as a warning.
8. work out = calculate or solve. Why: You can work out a total or a problem.

Exercise 4B, model advice: “When you come across a new multi-word verb, look it up in context. Work out its meaning, write an example, and check whether its object can go between the verb and the particle.” Why: Meaning and word order are both important for phrasal verbs.

Exercise 5 · Formal and informal register

- a Formal notice: “Everyone has to sign in.” Why: All guests must be signed in sounds like a written rule.
- b Informal speech: “A lot of people arrived at his home after midnight.” Why: A bunch of, turned up, and his place are conversational.
- c Very formal report: “The committee decided to end his contract.” Why: Affirmative decision, with regard to, and termination are formal, abstract wording.
- d Informal speech: “Will you be at the game on Saturday?” Why: Gonna is a spoken reduction of going to.
- e Informal speech: “The food was great.” Why: Great food, this is a short conversational comment.
- f Formal contract: “Payment depends on meeting clause 5.3.” Why: Shall be subject to and fulfilment are legal or administrative language.

Other rephrasings are valid if they change the register while keeping the meaning.

1.1 What’s in a name? — printed pages 8–10

Page 8, Exercise 2A · Name expressions

1. named after — Use after when a person receives another person's name.

2. live up to — This means meet the expectations attached to a name or reputation.
3. made a name — This means became known for an achievement.
4. household name — This means widely known.
5. put my name forward — This means volunteered or applied.
6. clear her name — This means prove she was not guilty.
7. by name — This means using each person's name.
8. in name only — The title exists, but the real power does not.
9. first name — This is the given name, contrasted with middle and last names.
10. maiden name — Traditionally, the surname used before marriage.

Page 8, Exercise 2B · Match expressions to meanings

a first, middle, and last names. Why: These may identify a person on official documents. b maiden, married, or last name; reputation-related expressions can also change. Why: Names and reputations can change over time. c live up to your name, make a name for yourself, clear your name. Why: All concern reputation. d by name. e put your name forward. f household name. g in name only. h named after. Official document fields vary by country.

Page 8, Exercises 3B–C · Reading

3B, main idea: Names can create impressions and may influence opportunities, but the evidence in the article is not consistent. Why: The text presents both a positive claim about name effects and conflicting hiring studies.

1. No. Why: The article gives unusual names chosen by people outside celebrity circles too.
2. People associate some names more strongly with success and other qualities. Why: Mehrabian's research asked people for instinctive reactions to first names.
3. A name might affect whether a candidate receives a callback, but the studies disagree. Why: The article reports different outcomes for similar résumé experiments.
4. Celebrity culture and ethnic diversity. Why: Satran says both encourage people to consider a wider range of names.

Page 8, Exercise 4B · Colloquial vocabulary

1. favoring = preferring. Why: The sentence refers to choosing unusual names.
2. increasingly outlandish = becoming more unusual or extreme. Why: Increasingly describes a trend; outlandish means very unconventional.
3. reach the top of the tree = become highly successful. Why: It is a metaphor for the highest position.
4. career-wise = in terms of a career. Why: -wise introduces the topic or aspect being discussed.
5. cut and dried = clear and definite. Why: The writer questions whether the effect of a name is so simple.
6. call-backs = invitations to continue in a selection process. Why: Employers contact some applicants again.
7. individuals like = people such as. Why: It introduces an example.

Exercises 1, 2C, 3A, and 4A: personal discussion. A strong answer gives a view, a reason, and an example. Avoid presenting the article's disputed name associations as facts about people.

Page 9, Exercise 5B · Uses of the continuous aspect

1. c — change in progress. Why: Getting easier and easier describes a developing trend.
2. d — repeated behavior, often irritating. Why: Always talking highlights the speaker's annoyance.
3. e — possible plan. Why: I'm considering expresses an undecided idea.

4. b — unfinished action with duration. Why: Has been trying ... for months emphasizes an ongoing effort.
5. a — background action. Why: The reading was in progress when the speaker got home.
6. f — tentative request. Why: I was hoping softens the request to borrow a car.

Page 9, Exercise 6A · Change to a continuous form if appropriate

1. He might be having lunch. Why: The activity may be in progress now.
2. We've been waiting for an hour! Why: The speaker emphasizes the duration of an unfinished wait.
3. She owns a small house. Why: Own describes a state; keep the simple form.
4. I'm trying to work. Why: The work is in progress now.
5. She had been expecting the news since Monday. Why: The expectation continued up to the letter's arrival.
6. That chicken dish tasted great. Why: Tasted describes a quality of the dish; keep the simple form.
7. Who do these keys belong to? Why: Belong is a state verb; keep the simple form.
8. We will have been living here for twenty-five years. Why: The continuous form stresses duration up to a future point.
9. I'm working on a project at the moment. Why: At the moment indicates a current, temporary activity.
10. My partner was making dinner when I got home. Why: Dinner preparation was in progress when another action happened.

Exercise 6B–C: Media needed. The recording is needed for the official check and unstressed auxiliary pronunciation. Exercise 7: personal completion; for example, “At the moment I'm studying continuous forms.”

Page 10 · Writing a personal profile

8A: The sample profile would suit an author's website or “About me” page. Why: It combines publications, background, and personal interests for readers.

8B: It is positive, friendly, and specific, although some sentences are long. Why: It gives concrete books, places, and hobbies without sounding like a formal résumé.

9A–B: Answers depend on the audience. A professional profile should lead with relevant experience and qualifications; a personal blog can include interests and tastes. Why: Readers expect different information in each setting. Avoid unnecessary private details such as a home address.

10A: The outline is generally suitable for a personal site. Why: Its interests, skills, and qualifications help readers understand the writer; family details depend on the purpose and audience.

11: Write your own 150–200-word profile. Why: There is no single correct answer. Check audience, concrete examples, organization, tone, and accuracy.

1.2 What are you like? — printed pages 11–13 and 148

Page 11, Exercise 2A · Present and past habits

Present examples: I'll look for clues; I'm always watching; keep practicing; I'm inclined to be; I'm prone to making; I have a tendency to focus; as a rule; nine times out of ten. Why: These describe characteristic or repeated present behavior.

Past examples: didn't use to have; would spend; kept making. Why: These describe a former state or repeated past actions. Was always + -ing and was forever + -ing are valid patterns, but an exact example is not visible in the message-board text.

Exercises 2B–D: Media needed. Stress and speaker attitude cannot be checked reliably without the recording.

Page 11, Exercise 3A · Complete the habit expressions

1. I have a tendency to sleep in late. Why: The noun tendency needs the article a.
2. I'm not inclined to be very laid-back. Why: Inclined takes a to-infinitive.
3. I'm always looking for new things to learn. Why: Continuous forms need verb-ing after be.
4. As a rule, I try not to work on the weekend. Why: As a rule is a fixed expression.
5. Nine times out of ten, I'll be right about my first impressions. Why: Out of forms the proportion.
6. As a child, I would spend hours reading. Why: Would can describe repeated past actions when the past context is clear.

Exercises 3B–C: personal answers. Describe a real habit and explain whether it helps you.

Page 12, Exercises 5–6 · Personality test

5A.1: The MBTI sorts responses into one of sixteen personality profiles. Why: The article says participants answer questions about thinking, problem-solving, and communication. 5A.2: Companies use it. Why: The listing names several employers. 5A.3: Personal evaluation; support your opinion with a reason.

5B and 6B: Media needed. The article preview does not contain the radio interview answers. 6A: 1 sweeping generalizers = people who generalize too broadly; 2 detail-obsessed nit-pickers = people overly focused on small details; 3 obsessive planners = people who plan excessively; 4 last-minute deadline junkies = people who habitually leave tasks until just before they are due; 5 recharge your batteries = regain energy; 6 flat-pack furniture = furniture sold in parts for the buyer to assemble. Why: Each phrase describes a behavior or everyday object in the interview context.

Page 13, Exercises 7–8 · Profiles and idioms

7: Choose letters that fit your own preferences, then explain your choices. Why: It is a self-description task with no single correct profile. Printed page 158 is now available in the supplemental scan; compare your four-letter result with its profile table and say which parts fit you. The table includes labels such as The Strategist (INTJ), The Engineer (INTP), The Artist (ISFP), and The Dreamer (INFP). Treat the descriptions as discussion prompts, not proven facts about a person.

8A: 1 yes-man = someone who agrees with the boss automatically; 2 whiz kid = very talented young person; 3 busybody = someone who meddles; 4 chatterbox = someone who talks a lot; 5 pain in the neck = annoying person or task; 6 dark horse = person with unexpected qualities; 7 old hand = experienced person; 8 set in their ways = resistant to change; 9 black sheep = family member seen as different or disapproved of; 10 life and soul of the party = person who makes a gathering lively. Why: The surrounding sentence gives a clue to each idiom.

8B: 1 set in their ways; 2 an old hand; 3 a chatterbox; 4 a dark horse; 5 a pain in the neck (the accounts are the annoying task); 6 a whiz kid; 7 a busybody; 8 the life and soul of the party. Why: Match the clue in each situation to the definitions in 8A.

1A, opposites: considerate / selfish; circumspect / impetuous; conservative / liberal; temperamental / easy-going; gregarious / introverted. Why: Each pair contrasts a characteristic with its opposite.

1B, descriptions: 1 selfish (does not help others); 2 temperamental (mood changes quickly); 3 conservative (dislikes new approaches); 4 introverted (prefers quiet and limited social contact); 5 easy-going (relaxed); 6 circumspect (careful before deciding); 7 liberal (open to freedom and new ideas); 8 impetuous (acts without thinking); 9 considerate (thinks about others); 10 gregarious (enjoys socializing).

Idioms 1A–B: 1 big cheese (e) — influential person; 2 couch potato (c) — inactive person; 3 loose cannon (b) — unpredictable person who may cause harm; 4 rotten apple (a) — person whose behavior harms a group; 5 tough cookie (f) — person who handles difficulty; 6 wet blanket (d) — person who spoils others' fun. Why: Each picture or situation illustrates the idiom's figurative meaning.

1.3 Picture perfect — printed pages 14–15

Page 14, Exercises 1–4 · Portraits and speculation

1B: Bailey values seeing people as they are and drawing out a genuine reaction without judging them. Why: Those ideas are central to the short text about his portrait photography.

2B–D: Media needed. The portraits are visible, but the exercise asks what speakers say in the recording. 3: Useful speculative forms include I'd say..., She might be..., She gives the impression of being..., It looks as if.... Why: They express different degrees of certainty.

4.1: "It seems to me that she's a bit lonely." Why: It seems to me presents a personal impression. 4.2: "He gives the impression of being angry." Why: Give the impression of takes a noun or -ing form. 4.3: "I imagine she's an actress." Why: I imagine marks an inference rather than a fact. 4.4: "If I had to make a guess, I'd say she was happy with her life." Why: The conditional phrase makes the claim tentative. 4.5: "I'm pretty sure he's not telling us everything." Why: Pretty sure signals relatively high confidence, not certainty. 4.6: "I imagine she could be an only child." Why: Could be keeps the possibility open.

Page 15, Exercises 5–7 · Vague language

5: Speakers use vague language when an exact number, label, or list is unnecessary. Why: Phrases such as about fifty and sort of make casual speech approximate and natural.

6A.1: "I just have a couple of things to do." Why: A couple of needs of before a noun. 6A.2: "Why don't we meet at about eight?" Why: Exactly eight-ish combines precision with approximation and is contradictory. At eight-ish is also natural. 6A.3: "I left a lot of stuff at the hotel, but I can pick it up later." Why: Stuff is uncountable, so use singular reference it. 6A.4: "We've got plenty of time." Why: The expression is plenty of, without a. 6A.5: "We've sort of finished the accounts." Why: Sort of is the fixed informal phrase. 6A.6: "There'll be about forty people attending." Why: About forty is a complete approximation; forty or so is another option, but do not combine them as about forty and so.

6B–D: Media needed. The exact linking and omitted sounds must be checked against the recording. 7: Personal speaking task; support portrait guesses with visible details.

1.4 Francesco's Venice — printed pages 16–17

2: Francesco is a historian and writer from a family whose story is connected to Venice. Why: He can combine knowledge of the city's history with a personal connection.

3.1 rotting — The wood is decaying. 3.2 bequeathed — Chiara left the house to another family. 3.3 warehouse — Goods were stored there. 3.4 showroom — Goods were displayed to buyers. Why: Each word matches the function or condition described in its sentence.

4–5: Media needed. Scene order and details of the house cannot be confirmed from the preview alone.

7A–B: Media needed. The object and key phrases are in the recording. 8 and 9B: Personal speaking or writing tasks; explain an object's origin, appearance, associated memory, and value.

9A: The gramophone is special because it was handed down through the writer's family and reminds the writer of childhood visits to his grandfather. Why: Its emotional value comes from family memories, not simply its age or price.

Language Bank — printed page 129

Exercise 1 · Choose the verb form

1. a, isn't working. Why: At the moment describes a temporary problem.
2. b, haven't finished. Why: The result matters: the work is still incomplete.
3. a, was having. Why: The enjoyable activity was in progress when the father arrived.
4. a, is weighing. Why: Right now marks an action in progress.
5. b, don't know. Why: Know is normally a state verb.
6. a, was looking. Why: Looking through papers was the background action when the letter was found.
7. a, am talking. Why: The phone conversation is happening now.
8. b, didn't hear. Why: Hear normally takes a simple form for this completed event.
9. a, has been studying. Why: All morning emphasizes the duration of an activity.
10. a, am doing. Why: The course is a temporary arrangement for this summer.

Exercise 2A · Add habitual will or would

1. On Sunday mornings, I will get up early and go for a run. Why: Will can describe a characteristic present habit.
2. I will sometimes wait for hours before a bus arrives. Why: It describes a repeated present experience.
3. My mother-in-law will always bake a cake when we visit. Why: Will always emphasizes characteristic behavior.
4. He will keep bothering me for my number. Why: Will keep + -ing stresses irritating repetition.
5. The children won't stop fighting. Why: Won't suggests refusal or persistent behavior.
6. She will spend the first half-hour chatting. Why: It describes her regular behavior.
7. My parents would take us camping in the rain. Why: Would describes repeated past action.
8. My grandfather wouldn't shout or tell us off. Why: Wouldn't describes a characteristic past refusal or absence of that behavior.

Exercise 2B · Complete the questions

1. Why are you crying? Why: The crying is happening now.
2. How long had he been working there before they fired him? Why: The work continued up to a later past event.
3. What have you been doing since you graduated? Why: The question asks about activity over a period continuing to now.

4. How long have you lived / have you been living in Miami? Why: Both are natural with live for a continuing situation; the continuous form highlights duration.
5. Who were you talking to when I saw you earlier? Why: The conversation was in progress at that past moment.
6. What did you want to be when you were a child? Why: Want is a state verb and the time is finished.
7. Have you been waiting long? Why: The wait began earlier and may still be in progress.
8. Why didn't you finish your degree? Why: The question asks about a completed past outcome.

Exercise 3 · Complete the habit expressions

1. has a tendency to cause — Tendency takes to + verb.
2. is inclined to buy — Inclined takes a to-infinitive.
3. are prone to arguing — After prone to, use a noun or -ing form.
4. keep wondering — Keep takes an -ing form.
5. is always making — Present continuous plus always can show an irritating habit.
6. kept cheating — Kept + -ing expresses repeated past behavior.
7. As a rule, I don't use — This fixed phrase introduces a general habit.
8. would always bring — Would describes a repeated past action.

Exercise 4 · Complete the speculation phrases

1. imagine; looks — I imagine... and looks as though... both express an inference.
2. make — The collocation is make a guess.
3. sure — The phrase is I'm pretty sure.
4. guess — I'd guess... expresses an uncertain interpretation.
5. wonder — I wonder if... introduces a question or possibility.
6. say; seems — I'd say... gives an opinion; it seems to me... gives an impression.
7. give — The phrase is give the impression of + -ing.

Study reminder

For grammar items, read the Why explanation aloud and make one new sentence using the same pattern. For personal tasks, write your own response and ask for feedback. For media tasks, provide the course recording or transcript so the remaining answers can be verified.
